Problem: (42)

Problem: (43)

This is the vital point.

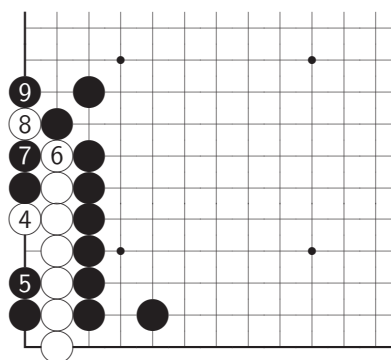

Problem: (43)

Good move, this makes White's eyespace as small as possible.

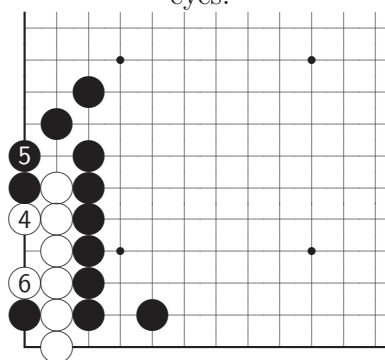

Problem: (43)

Correct. If White plays A, Black can just play B (or atari at C in some situations). White can't make two eyes.

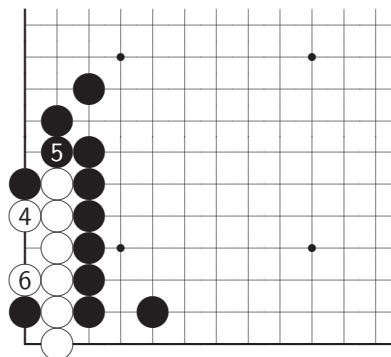

Problem: (43)

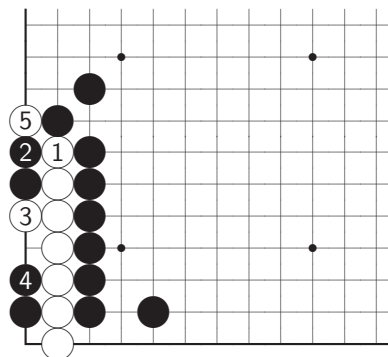

Black almost had it. There's a better move than A.

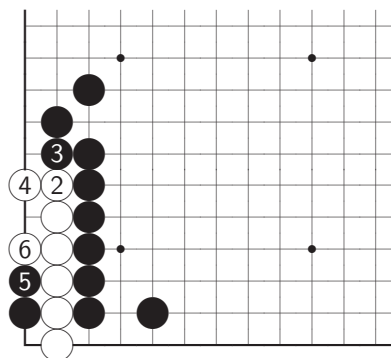

Problem: (43)

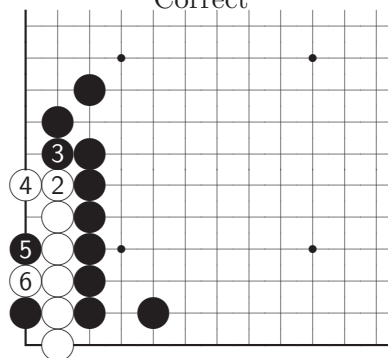

Problem: (43)

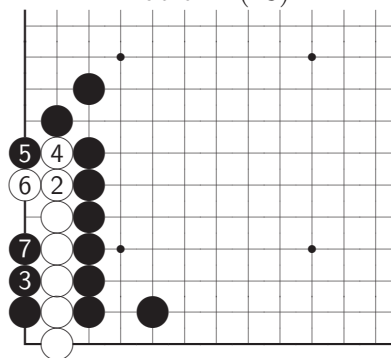

Problem: (43)

Problem: (43)

Problem: (44)

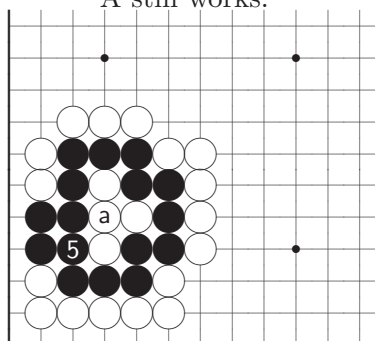

The shape of White's four stones is called a 'bulky four'. If Black captures White's four stones, White will immediately play at A, and Black won't be able to make two eyes.

If Black does nothing, White can atari at B, making a 'bulky five' shape. If Black then captures, White A still works.

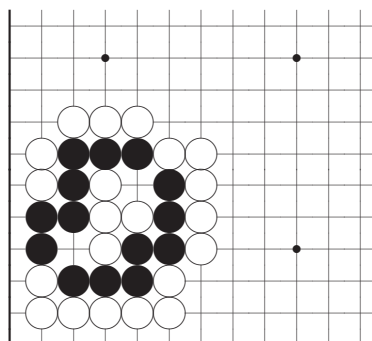

Problem: (44)

Even if White passes...

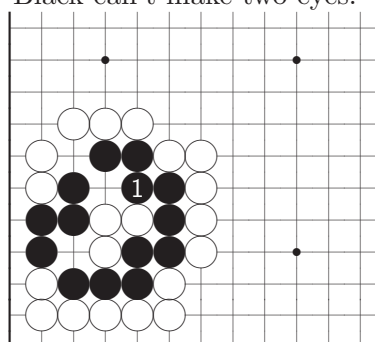

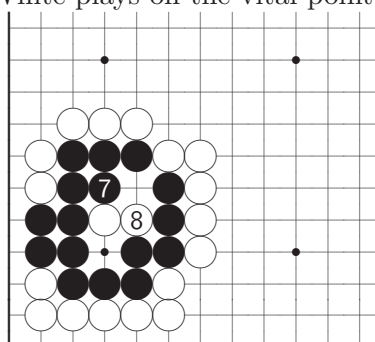

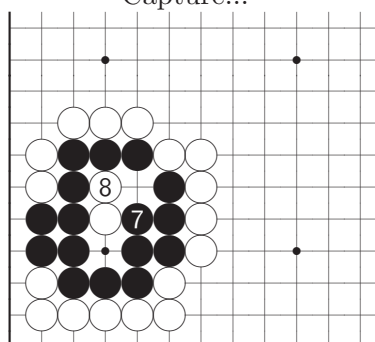

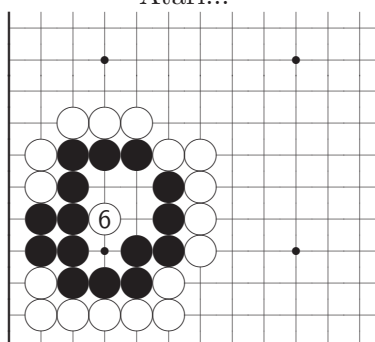

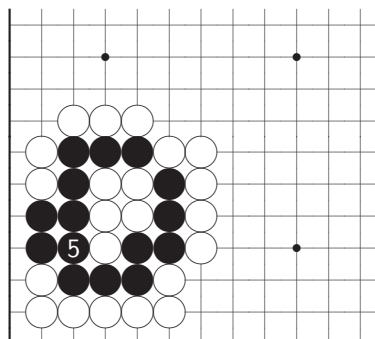

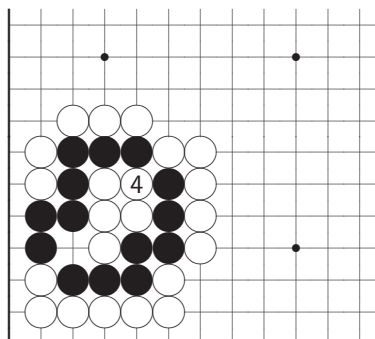

Problem: (44)

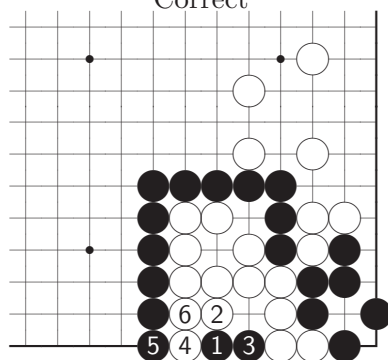

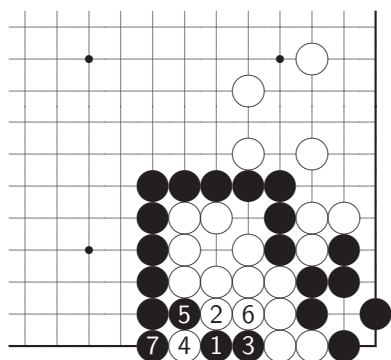

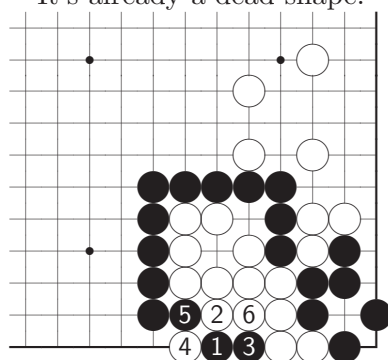

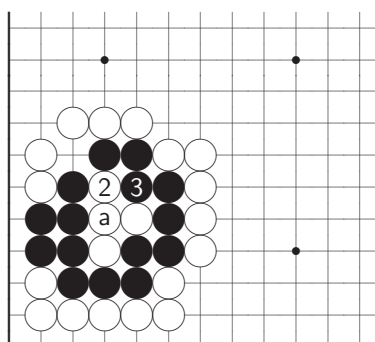

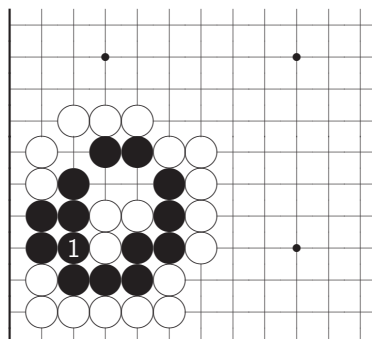

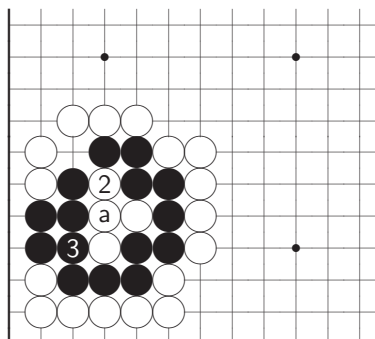

Black can't make two eyes.

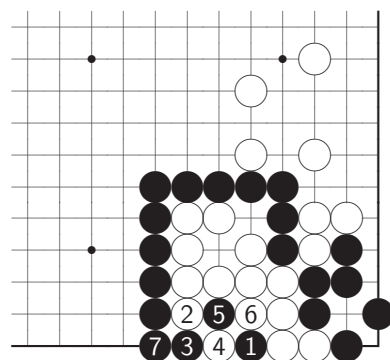

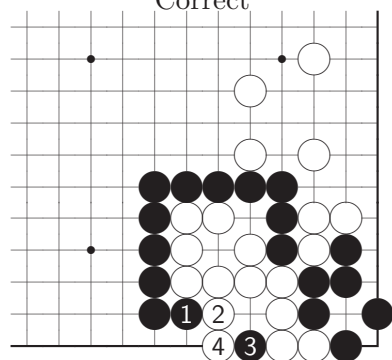

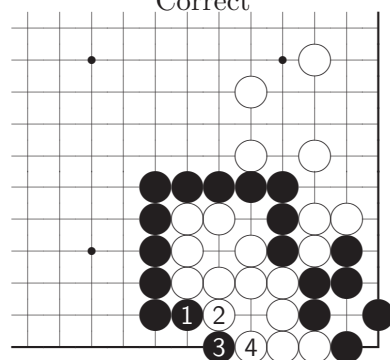

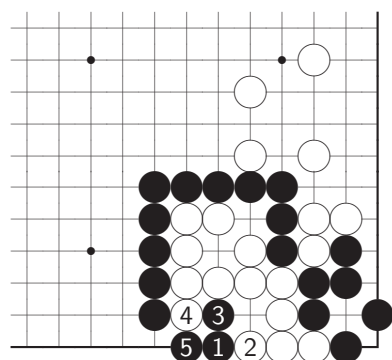

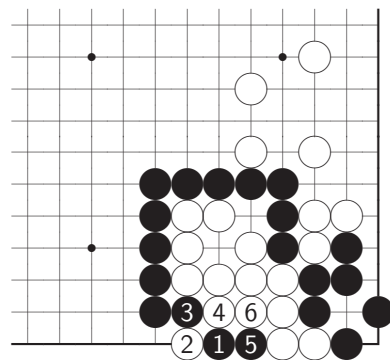

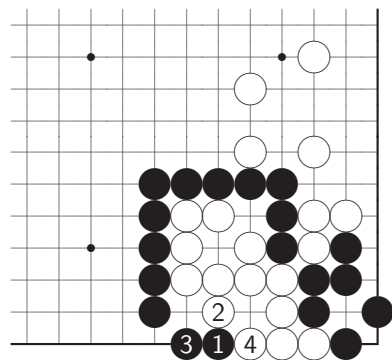

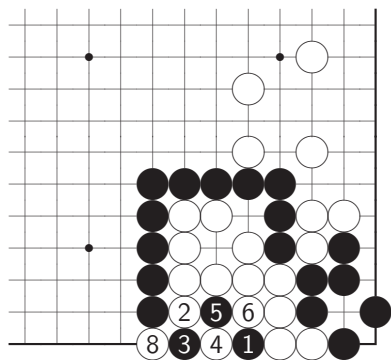

Problem: (44)

Black passes. Black's already dead, but for the sake of demonstration...

Problem: (46)

Problem: (46)
Black should be captured now, but this White move is a mistake...

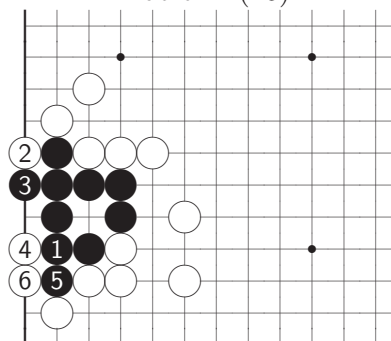

Problem: (46)
A and B are miai for Black (if White defends against one, Black plays the other), so Black lives.

This is a mess. Black has a move that settles things in a simple and clean manner.

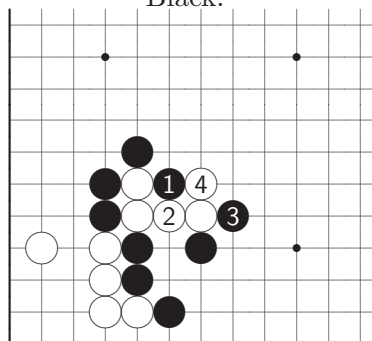

Problem: (48)

Next White can cut at A or B, so the position becomes very difficult for Black.

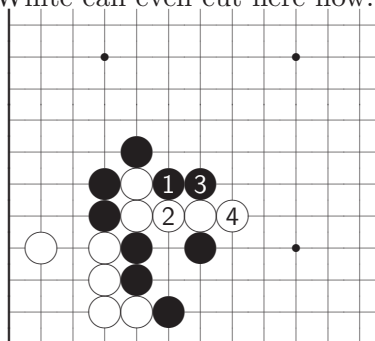

Problem: (48)

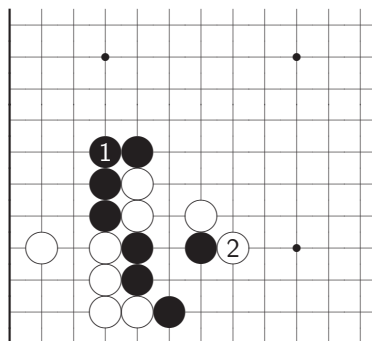

Black's missed a great opportunity. White can even cut here now.

Problem: (52)

Problem: (52)

Next if Black cuts at A, White can atari at B and capture two stones. If Black plays C instead, White can keep fighting at D, or just connect at A. Black had a way to capture the cutting stones instead.

Problem: (52)

Problem: (52)

Problem: (52)

Problem: (52)

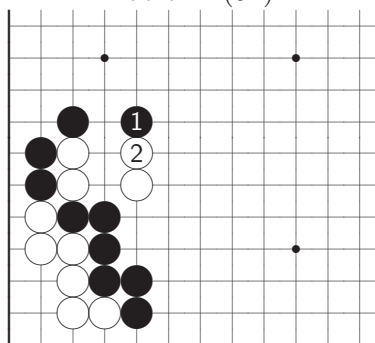

Problem: (52)

Problem: (53)

Correct. This is the best shape, because it gives Black the best potential for making eyes later. A and B are miai for Black now. If White tries to play A-C, Black D captures White's stones.

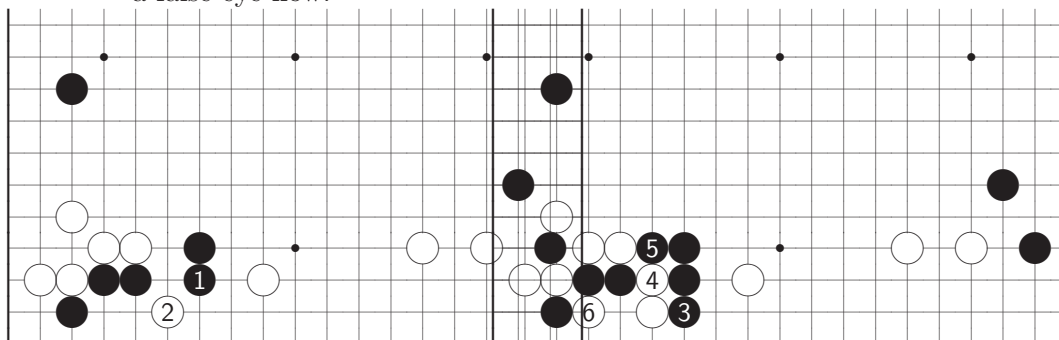

Problem: (53)

White plays on the vital point and Black's group becomes weak. Notice the relationship between A and B - the point at C can only ever become a false eye now.

Problem: (53)

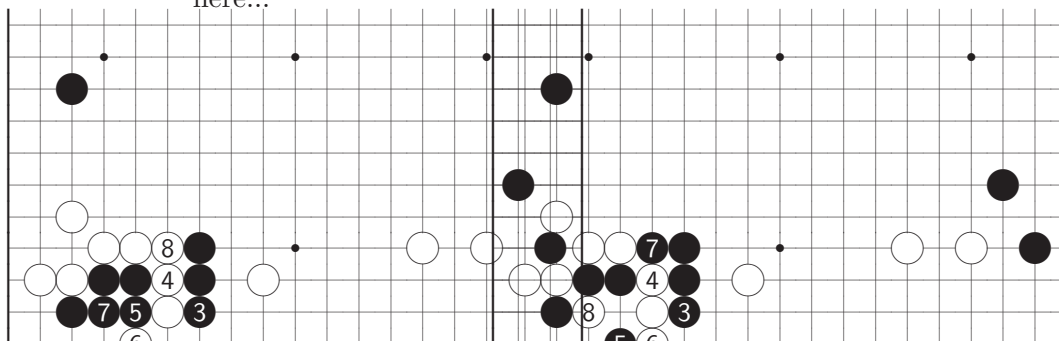

If the game continues like this, Black doesn't have much room to make eyes, so the whole group may be in trouble later.

Problem: (53)

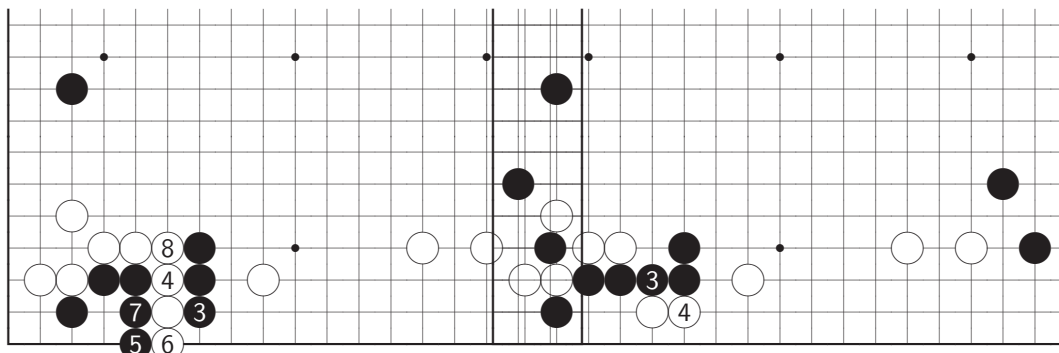

Later on there's still a vital point here...

Problem: (53)

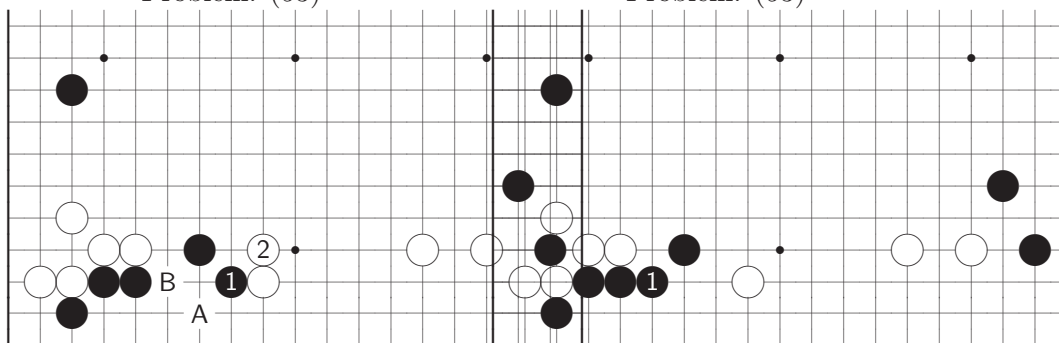

Problem: (53)

Problem: (53)

Problem: (53)

Problem: (53)

Problem: (53)

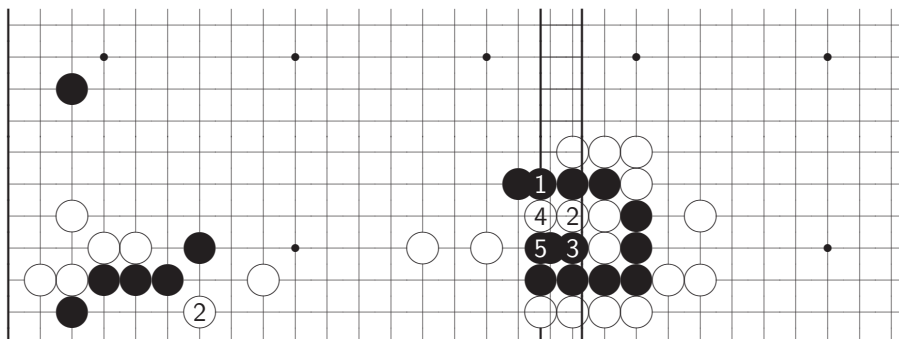

Problem: (53)

Making this exchange helps White.

In addition, Black still has weaknesses at A and B, so Black hasn't developed a good shape and still has to play another move here.

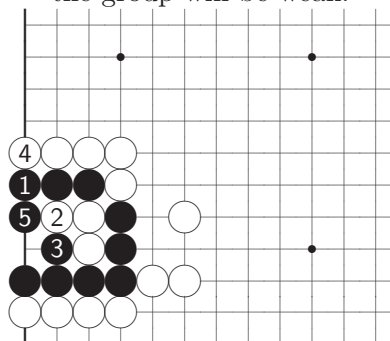

In some situations White might choose to play at A or B immediately after Black kicks with the diagonal attachment.

This move is uninspired.

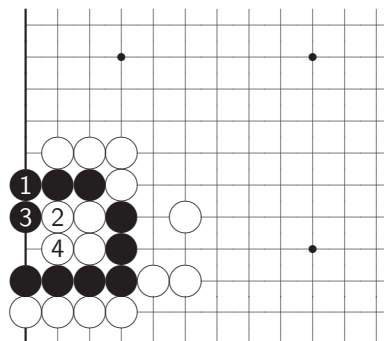

Problem: (53)
 Later on White can play here and
 Black doesn't have much eyespace, so the group will be weak.

Problem: (55)

Problem: (56)

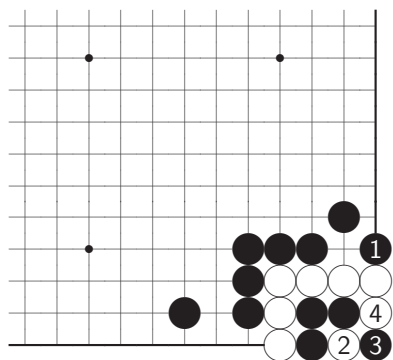

Correct. Now, even if White captures the four stones, it won't be possible to make two eyes.

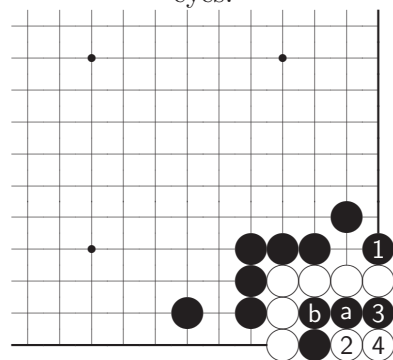

Problem: (56)
White's alive.

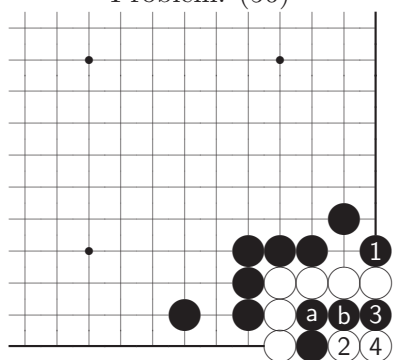

Problem: (56)
Black can't connect at A. If he could, he wouldn't have any liberties and his stones would be captured. After that, it would be Whites turn and White could play at A to make two eyes.
